

Forced labour is not okay

More than half of forced labour survivors in Australia are migrants to our shores. Help identify when someone is at risk of modern slavery, or you suspect is living in modern slavery-like conditions.

Forced labour occurs when people:

- are made to work against their will, often with little or no pay and no freedom of movement
- may suffer physical abuse and be unable to leave their employer
- may be a migrant worker on a specific working visa or have no access to their personal identification documents.

Help is available and you can report their employer. Reporting an employer does not mean the worker has to leave Australia. They may be able to stay in Australia for up to 12 months under the Workplace Justice Pilot program.

What do I do if I or someone I know is in a situation of forced labour?

- You can contact the Australian Federal Police on 131 237 or report online at www.afp.gov.au
- You can also contact Anti-Slavery Australia on 02 9514 8115 or visit www.antislavery.org.au
- If you suspect you or someone you know is in immediate danger call 000

www.healthsharevic.org.au